

Proud of Hocon

In the middle of March, a fire at Long Beach West in Stratford, Connecticut revealed that 50 propane tanks had not been properly emptied and removed at the time of the property closing.

The presence of the tanks caused an immediate danger during the fire, as well as an on-going public safety threat.

Hocon Inc., a Norwalk-based propane company, heard about the issue and volunteered to remove the tanks free of charge and transport them to their facility for safekeeping.

They were aided by the Fire and Public Works Departments in removing the propane tanks.

The Propane Gas Association of New England (PGANE) is very proud of its member, Hocon Inc.

Our members have a strong sense of community responsibility, and we wanted to thank Hocon for its unsolicited response to alleviate this public safety issue.

Sincerely,
Joe Rose
President

Propane Gas Association of New England

